Welcome

to the August issue of the Advertiser Magazine

We hope you are all having a fun-filled summer so far. It's really lovely to see the place once again brimming with visitors, especially those from the UK and Ireland.

With the Dreambeach festival and Gay Pride all behind us now for another year, August is a month to just chill, go to the beach and refuse to cook or do anything else more strenuous than lift an ice-cream or a refreshing cocktail.

Walk slowly, stay up late when it's cool and sleep through the hottest midday sun. Don't dwell too much on the fact that getting a parking space in the local supermarket is the August equivalent of winning the lottery.

Once again, we have a jammed packed issue and some wonderful articles.

A massive thank you, as always, to our many great contributors, loyal advertisers and of course, you, our readers.

Andrew & Cheryl

LifeStyle

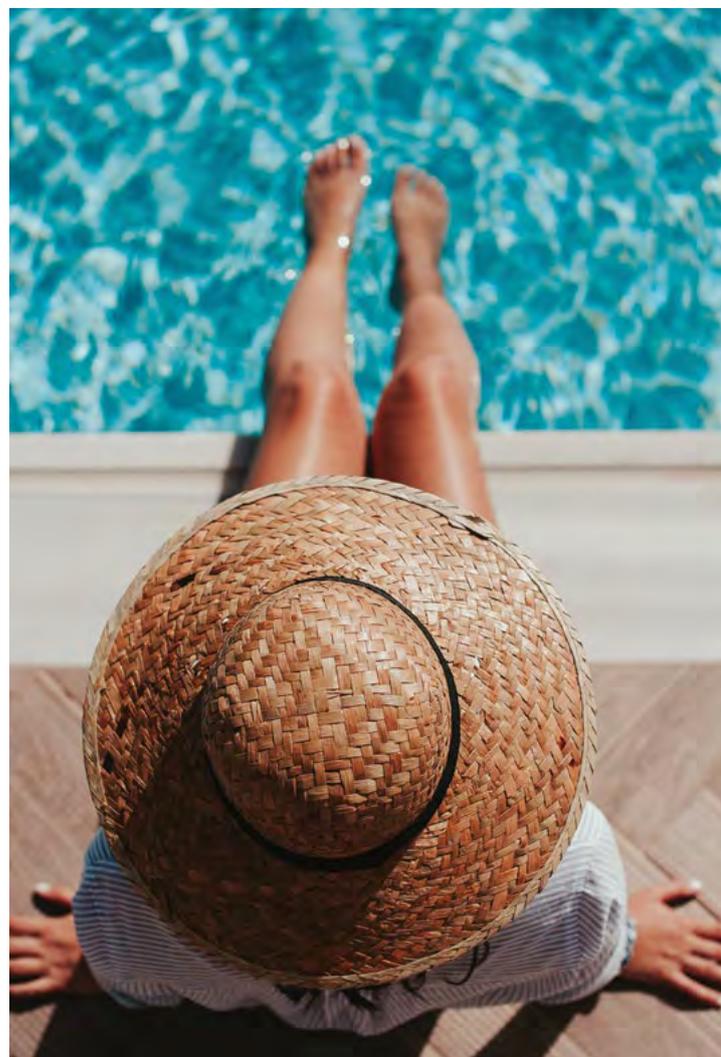

A Warning for Tourists... Be warned!

If you haven't noticed yet, August is full on. Full on hot, full on busy and full on awesome! The terrific weather combined with the cooling sea brings tens of thousands of people to enjoy the area. The cafes and bars are jumping from morning to... the next morning. But there do lurk some nasty things and I will attempt to guide you through these shenanigans, without stealing your wallet.

THROW ANOTHER SHRIMP ON THE BARBIE

Damn you Paul Hogan and that stupid sentence that has never, ever been uttered on the island of Australia. Upon anyone hearing that I'm Australian, they inevitably say this sentence with their best 'strayan accent, which does make me want use the deadly 5-point exploding heart technique. Now that I've got that off my chest - this is not the warning, well, it is - don't say that sentence! It does however let me segue into the shrimp part.

It's highly advisable to avoid being out in the sun between 2-5pm. This is not the time to go to the beach or laze by the pool. I know what you're thinking: "This is great, no one here. We have it all to ourselves". There's a reason for this! If the locals are not there, that's because it's too bloody hot and you are going to lobster yourself. And sun cream, sun screen or sun block, whatever you want to call it, make sure you put it on every 2 hours, it doesn't last all day and will diminish after swimming.

A HIGHLIGHTS OF DO'S AND DON'T'S

- Post COVID, people are starting to go back to a double-kiss on greetings. I'm still not 100% what to do now, so do let the local start the interaction. A heartfelt head-nod is still fine by me.
- Don't expect to be eating dinner before 7pm. Why would you, when if you're doing it properly, you just finished lunch at 4:30pm? 7 o'clock is the time for an ice-cream or some cold watermelon. 9:30pm or later is best for dinner, afterall, you're going to bed at 1:30am, right?
- Do know where to swim at the beach, if you're not sure, ask a local. Nothing worse than a tragedy on holiday.
- Don't park across 2 carparks. Nothing worse than a tragedy on holiday.
- Do try "Tinto de Verano" in the afternoon. A summer wine served with ice-cubes is as refreshing as a new idea by a politician. Make sure that they serve it with a nip of vermouth too or tell them you want your money back.
- Don't take selfies in dangerous places, particularly if there is a bull around. I learnt that one the hard way.
- Do take advantage of siesta and remember that the shops really do close for lunch. But it's going to be okay, they open again in the afternoon. You'll still be able to buy your novelty spoon for grandma.
- Don't listen to anyone who makes a list to fill up their article. Remain on alert.

If you have any feedback for me, to dispute, argue, agree, support, harass or to pinch, flick me an email bradh_os@hotmail.com.

Introducing the virtual battery service

The Ecocorp Solar new virtual battery service offers you an opportunity to optimise your investment in solar panels.

Being 'virtual' they are also a massive step towards complete environmentally friendly 'green' energy production.

Solar panel production is very rarely in step with the electricity consumption of most households. As a result, circa 30% of the annual customers' solar panels productivity is unused.

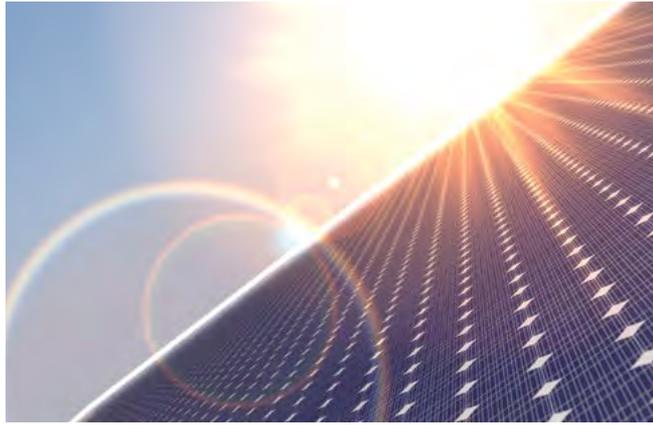

To address this and also minimise electricity charges, customers have historically sought options to feedback or invested in a physical battery storage system. Those who already have physical battery storage can also use the virtual battery. This new virtual battery option affords an holistic more cost-effective solution.

Using cloud-based technology, your unused solar panel production is stored.

Giving you the opportunity to use 100% of the production from your solar panels.

The stored electric can then be drawn down at a time to suit you. For example, on overcast days, periods of high electric consumption, at night or during those seasons when the solar production is less due to a combination of the shorter days and the sun being 'lower on the horizon'.

Any excesses are stored for 12 months, so perfect for holiday homeowners.

Through your electricity suppliers' App you will be able to access the virtual battery data.

Ecocorp Solar in conjunction with our specialist Spanish 'Super Engineer' partner can, if you choose, deal with all of the necessary technical and required administrative paperwork.

Your home is personal to you, so the amount of energy you consume and the time you demand it will vary.

Choose the experts for the best advice.

Ecocorp Solar SL have 15 years experience in design and configuration of bespoke solar power systems.

Their knowledgeable and friendly team will work closely with you to provide and install a solution that meets your unique requirements.

Ecocorp Solar offer a FREE no obligation home assessment and quotation service.

Bon Appétit!

Everyone like a bit of tea and cake in the afternoon so a few teatime treats for you this month.

CLASSIC SHORTBREAD

At La Meseta we put homemade shortbread in the suites for our guests to enjoy, always very popular and with just 3 ingredients, simple to make.

Ingredients

- 60g salted cold butter
- 120g caster sugar
- 180g plain plain flour

Method

Cut the butter into small cubes then rub into the flour until it resembles breadcrumbs. Add in the sugar then quickly bring the mixture together with your hands to form a soft smooth dough. Wrap it in cling film and chill in the fridge for 30 minutes.

On a floured surface roll out to 1/2 cm thick and cut out your biscuit shapes, we use a heart shaped cutter that measures 2 inches by 2 inches, this will give you approx 20 biscuits.

Bake on a lined baking sheet in a preheated oven at 170° for 15 to 20 minutes until a very light golden colour, they don't want to be too dark then immediately transfer to a wire cooling rack to ensure they crisp up. These will keep for 2 weeks in an airtight container.

VICTORIA SPONGE

If I had to pick a favourite cake it would be good old Victoria sponge made even better with fluffy buttercream and fresh berries.

Ingredients

- 250g margarine
- 250g caster sugar
- 250g self raising flour
- 4 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon of vanilla extract

As baking margarine is soft these days this can be done in the 'all in one method' if you have a food mixer all the better as it takes just 30 seconds to mix!

Method

Adding the flour first, place all the ingredients into your mixing bowl then either with an electric mixer, mix for approx 30 seconds until all incorporated, or with a wooden spoon mix and beat for a couple of minutes.

Transfer to 2 lined and greased 8 inch pans and back in a preheated oven at 180 degrees for 30 minutes.

Allow to cool for 10 mixtures then transfer to a cooling rack and leave to cool completely. Fill with buttercream and jam and either decorate with a dusting of icing sugar or add more buttercream to the top and add some berries.

SULTANA SCONES

No tea party is complete without these! We always serve them with our afternoon tea and strangely there is always one spare when I make a batch!

Makes 6 to 8 - depending on cutter size

Ingredients

- 250g self raising flour
- 80g cold salted butter diced
- tablespoon caster sugar
- handful of sultanas
- 1 medium egg
- 30ml milk

Method

Rub the butter into the flour until its like breadcrumbs then stir in the sugar and sultanas. Beat the egg & milk together and mix into the dry ingredients with a fork. Hold back a little of the liquid to brush the scones with. Once you have mixed as much as you can with a fork, use your hands to bring together and make a soft dough. Scones prefer as little handling as possible, too much kneading will make them tough. On a floured surface roll out to about an inch thick then cut out your scones. Use a 2 or 2.5 inch cutter. Brush on the remaining milk and egg. Bake at 220° for 18-20 minutes until risen and golden. Don't open the oven door until at least 15 mins has passed or they will sink! Serve warm with clotted cream and jam

I would normally say put the kettle on but its a little warm for that so how about a refreshing mojito.

COCKTAIL

This is for 1 cocktail multiply up as required

Ingredients

- 5 mint leaves plus extra to garnish
- 2 oz of white rum
- 1 oz fresh lime juice
- 1/2 oz sugar syrup
- Ice
- Club soda or sparkling water

Method

Muddle the lime juice, sugar syrup and mint leaves in a small jug, crushing the mint as you go – you can use the end of a rolling pin for this. Pour into a tall glass and add a handful of ice.

Pour over the rum, stirring with a long-handled spoon. Top up with soda water, garnish with mint and serve.

Beautiful You

Everywhere we look nowadays is about being upbeat. Having a positive attitude is forced upon us, with smiling beautiful people on every advert and roadside poster. We are told to work on our bodies, our minds and, now it seems, they are after our souls. When did it become such a requirement to be happy?

I deal with people every single day who are depressed, flat, hopeless and, tell me they have lost their way. Think about that last one - Lost their way.....their way to where ?

Some imprinted destination of joy and beauty where milk and honey abound, or to a place they can feel free of torment and just have peace in their hearts.

To me, every single emotion is valid and necessary or it wouldn't be in your programme. We are expected to get over it, get yourself sorted, stiff upper lip etc. etc. etc. Rubbish. This type of coping does nothing except increase the suicide statistics. We used to have strong family bonds, best friends who would listen as we poured out our hearts. Only some of us are lucky enough to still have these pillars of support. Where life gets messy is when we are alone or feel unable to burden others with our problems. We say things as an apology for feeling sad like "Oh ignore me, I am just being silly" or "Take no notice, I will be fine". How tragic to think we actually ask to be ignored.

My advice in these moments are to simply 'Stop - just stop'. Sit with whatever emotion you are feeling, and fully experience it. I know that sounds crazy, but if we are capable of feeling this way, then it is a normal state of mind, albeit not a welcome state. So, take away the guilt you are adding to the equation as you will not need to apologise for feeling this negative.

I believe it is a valuable situation to feel this disconnected from the norm, so take time out, sit quietly wherever you feel safe and comfortable and, open this book at the sad page and really feel it. Think about what happened to trigger the emotion you are feeling right now. There is always a trigger. Sometimes it is an anniversary which tips us upside down and sometimes it is an estrangement or an argument that has upset us. Whatever the reason, the essence of it is the lesson we are being taught, against our choice. We can run away from the situation physically, but never emotionally. It is like a monster under the bed, waiting until you are sleeping before it jumps out and bites you on the ass. I never understood why you wouldn't look under the bed, and I am still a firm believer in that.

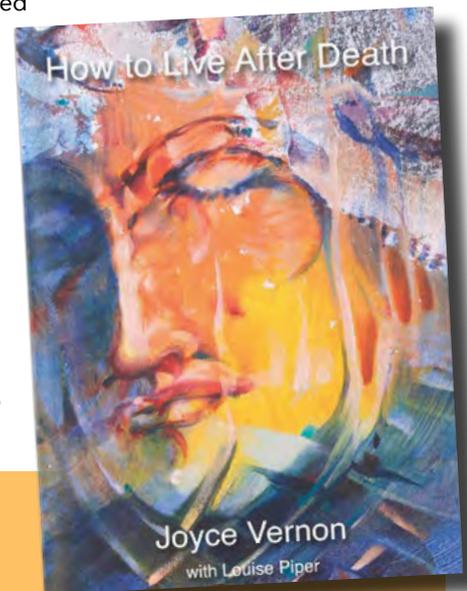

We are capable of so many emotions, and they are all tools to help us to cope with whatever life throws at us, so don't just use a few of them. If you are feeling angry, clean the kitchen, the garage, the spare room. When you feel low, spend time in the garden or outside, with or without friends. Listen to music but most importantly, do not apologise for how you are feeling. Your heart needs you to listen to it, not dismiss it with silly disclaimers. The best poems, stories, music and art were created from someone's anguish and experience.

Even photographs used to need a negative to produce the image so, being positive is impossible without also balancing it with being negative. No great image is without shadows and depth. Light and dark need each other. So by all means be positive when you feel it and, allow yourself to have a day off from it from time to time to feel how you truly maybe feeling at that time. If you are feeling any emotion at all it shows you are still alive, still trying your best and your mood will change as surely as the weather does.

You are alive, that will do for now.

What's the problem

At the Advertiser magazine, we recognise that everyone needs to reach out for advice now and then. Seeking the help of someone who can not only offer a completely objective point of view but, is also qualified to advise you, may not always be possible.

We are delighted to be able to offer the services of a qualified counsellor and psychotherapist, Theresa Wood, to answer any of our readers issues or problems.

Dear Theresa

I'm so upset, I'm a 45 year old woman, married with two children. A man I have been friends with at work for a while told me he is leaving. We have always been close and he has asked me for my number a few times but I said no. This man is kind affectionate and funny all the things my husband isn't. Don't get me wrong my husband is a good man and does everything for me and the children but he's never romantic, he will build something or decorate something and be delighted showing me what he's done. I cried in my car all the way home yesterday I should have given him my number I've missed my chance. I'm heartbroken.

Can you help
Suzie

Hi Suzie

I think you may be upset because you have lost your fantasy. I'm not being cruel but this man at work has been charming and funny and trying to have an affair with a married woman. We all like to feel that someone fancies us but in reality it's not real. What is real is that your husband is a good man, loves you and the children and shows you in very practical but real ways. If you would like your husband to be more romantic then tell him. Recall a time he did something romantic and tell him how much you loved it or what really turns you on. Ask him on a date and tell him your going to ravish him later, use your imagination and fantasies on him and see what happens.

Show your husband what you'd like him to show you.
Theresa

Suzie, you sound upset and confused. Take a moment to reflect and know that your family is sacred. You cry tears for a man who should have respected your commitment as another's wife and mother.

I'm not trying to diminish what you feel but I do ask you to imagine how your husband would feel if he knew that you had feelings for another man and you blamed him for not being enough - when you never even gave your husband the opportunity to change or understand your feelings. What if the situation were reversed? What if your husband was crying because a woman, he fancied at work left and although he had a good wife at home, he wished he'd gotten her number to keep in touch?

Why don't you give your family and your husband an opportunity to be the source of affection and kindness you say is lacking? Sometimes when we feel a great void in our lives, honesty and counselling is a good way to start to unfold the many emotional complexities within. Good luck to you.
Roseann

Suzie, your chance of what, destroying a family and years of trust. YOU be the romantic one...woo him..., run him a yummy bath, take him out, buy him flowers. give it a go lass, it may what you think you are missing without the pain and devastation. spoken with respect and concern.
Mandi

Lust/love.
don't throw a whole life that YOU built. Your husband is a reality, the man is a fantasy. Create excitement in what you already have. All the best
Fe

He would only bring heartache and break up your lovely family. We all want romance in our life but this is just a fantasy. Hope you and your husband have a long and happy life together.
Isabella

If you didn't give him your number beforehand, it's because you knew deep down, that you didn't want to. Maybe it's just because he's not there anymore, that you feel differently. But in your heart of hearts. You know it was the right thing to do. Maybe start a date night with your husband. Rekindle that fire that's just maybe buried a little bit. Good luck.
Collette

Your husband is a good man and does everything he can for you and the kids. You've said it all, you're a lucky woman! Just be thankful you've dodged a bullet! Get on with your life, maybe try to arrange things for you and hubby to spice up the romanticism. Value the important things in life!
Maureen

It's so easy to accept an apple from a different tree isn't it. Your male friend can't be that good if he's being like that and knows your married etc. Let it go.
Netty

It sounds like you are really mourning the 'what ifs' and the 'what could bes' of something that would probably be a big mistake. Excitement is fantastic but not worth what you probably already have right now. Take another look with a different view. Wishing you peace and happiness.
Debra

The life you fantasise having with this man is just that, fantasy. The everyday reality of it could be very different. You know how good your husband is, let him know that and show him what your idea of romance is and how much you enjoy it. I'm sure he'll take that on board to make you happy.

Q) WHAT IS THE MOST EFFECTIVE WAY TO REDUCE FRIZZ

A) Almost all of us battle frizz especially this time of the year when the atmosphere is very humid. But even when you use anti-frizz products, sometimes nothing seems to work on those scorching-hot summer days.

Just as plant roots travel toward the nearest source of water in the soil, if your hair is lacking natural moisture it will reach for the nearest source of moisture in the atmosphere. The atmospheric moisture is sucked in by your hair and gets trapped within the hairs proteins (where it belongs) making it revert back to its natural state. The effect is a head full of frizz that can ruin even the best beauty look. Straighteners are one of the worst culprits for zapping the natural moisture from our hair, that steam that you see when running the straighteners down your hair is your hairs natural moisture being expelled from your hair. Your hair needs this moisture for its stretch ability and strength so it will search where ever it can to replenish it.

While you can't blast the moisture out of the air on a humid summer's day, you can apply enough moisture to your hair from products so it doesn't have to search for it elsewhere.

Shampoos with high alcohol content tend to dehydrate the hair causing the hair to search for moisture. Using a good quality shampoo containing organic oils such as coconut and almond will reduce frizz. Use a shampoo with hydrating ingredients like glycerine, which is a great humectant, meaning it absorbs the extra moisture in the air to create a protective coating over the strands. The correct type of shampoo is a must, although if you have fine fly away hair be careful of hydrating shampoos as these shampoos can make your hair quite lank.

Conditioners and Masks. After shampooing, apply a conditioner every time and a mask at least once a week, this will fill the hair with moisture before you go outside.

Rubbing a towel aggressively against your hair will cause the cuticle to raise and cause damage. Instead, try drying your hair in a towel turban to prevent friction frizz.

Detangle your hair using a wide tooth comb instead of a nylon brush.

Heat protectors are a must when using heated tools.

Replacing your cotton pillowcase for a silk pillowcase will also reduce friction, the slippery fabric will allow your hairs cuticles to glide across the pillowcase rather than get snagged by it.

Straighteners must be run down your hair only when really necessary and quite quickly so that your hair does not have heat for too long in one area.

Enjoy your frizz free hair this Summer x

just for laughs

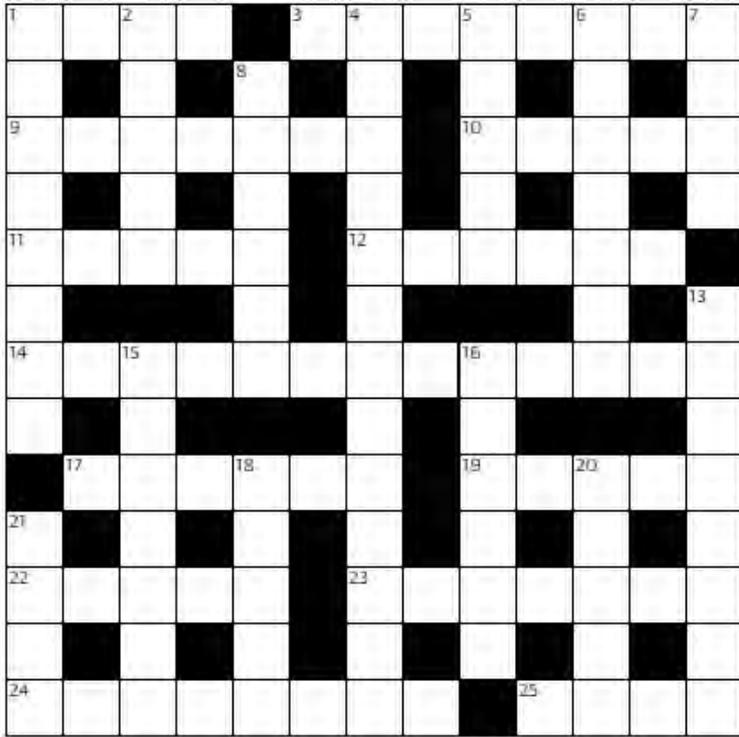

WIFE: let's get a rhododendron
 ME: I hate dinosaurs no thanks
 WIFE: it's not a dinosaur
 ME: What is it?
 WIFE: it's hard to describe without a thesaurus
 ME: I said no dinosaurs

When I was in 9th grade I got caught selling weed. My mom was devastated. So she transferred me to a rich private school thinking that was gonna help the situation, but in reality she gave me a promotion
