The Advertiser Magazine

Welcome to February's issue of the Advertiser Magazine

As we kick off a new month, it's a perfect time to reflect on the progress we've made and set new goals for the future.

February is a month of love. We all know that self-care is important, but it's easy to put it on the back burner when life gets busy. However, taking care of yourself is essential for living a happy and healthy life. In this issue, we'll be featuring articles on how to practice self-care. Our problem page discusses different types of relationships and how to build and maintain them as well as tips for setting boundaries to protect your mental and physical well-being.

We are excited to announce two new articles in this issue. In addition to our regular features, this issue also includes a book review from Dave The Teacher. Dave is an avid and accomplished reader and will be offering his opinion on some of his latest fiction finds. Also, we have a brand-new feature on gardening by our very own Jane Thomas giving information on plants typically found in the south east of Spain as well as tips on how to care for them.

In addition to all the great content in this issue, we're also excited to announce that we are in the process of making some changes to our website to give even more advertising exposure to our local and, very loyal, advertisers. These changes will also make it even easier for you to access our content. You can find all of issues from the previous 12 months on our website.

We hope you enjoy this issue of our magazine, and as always, we welcome your feedback and suggestions. Thank you for reading!

Andrew & Cheryl

BRAD VERSUS MACHINE

With the invention of artificial intelligence, it is now possible to have a computer write entire articles for us! Just imagine: no more laboriously staring at a blank screen, no more wondering what clever words to use to make a point. Instead, the computer can do all the hard work while you sit back and enjoy a cup of coffee! Who knows what incredible articles AI (artificial intelligence) could write? Perhaps it would produce a piece of literature that rivals the works of Shakespeare!

As a professional writer, I was not entirely sure what to make of the recent trend of using artificial intelligence as a tool to write articles. However, after getting over my initial apprehension, I decided to give it a try. At first, the results were unexpected, yet humorous. Instead of being informative, the AI wrote an article about why humans should give up on their iPhones and switch to robotic devices. It went on to say that robots can talk to each other instead of relying on text message like humans.

IT'S NOT PERFECT YET

AI may have good intentions, but even the most advanced AI can sometimes do the wrong thing. For example, an AI once tried to surprise a customer by sending them a birthday cake, but instead it sent a cake full of live bugs. Talk about a surprise! An AI recently tried to solve world hunger but instead attempted to bake a giant loaf of bread to feed the entire world. Unfortunately, the AI failed miserably as it was unable to access the necessary ingredients, and ended up with a soggy, misshapen lump of dough. Needless to say, it wasn't the perfect meal the AI had hoped for!

When the AI at the local robotics lab was asked to make a cup of coffee, everyone was left laughing. Instead of making coffee, it printed out an amazingly complex formula to create the perfect cup from scratch. After hours of befuddled calculations, the AI eventually produced a very small demitasse cup with a hint of coffee in it – barely enough for a mouse to enjoy!

A RISE OF THE MACHINES

AI is so hot these days, everyone is trying to get a piece of the action! But, no one is sure how to make it work for their needs. You could try doing some things to spice it up, like training the AI to perform sensual massages or finding an AI matchmaking service that tries to hook you up with the perfect robotic lover. Whatever you decide to do, there's no denying that AI is out of this world in the bedroom.

As technology and AI continue to develop, it is clear that the days of human authorship are numbered. With AI and automation taking the reins, the creativity and originality will inevitably suffer, as a computer cannot comprehend the nuances and subtle expressions of the human experience. Thus, while AI-generated writing may be a quick and efficient way to produce content, it will never match the beauty and impact of meaningful human writing.

** This article has been wholly made by AI. Definitely no BI (Brad Intelligence).

The Amazing Troll-Man
The Amazing Troll-Man

The Amazing Troll-Man, is a comedian called Wesley Metcalfe. He has, over the past few years, created a number of facebook accounts and called them "customer support". By changing the profile picture of the account to the logo of various large companies, he fools unsuspecting unhappy customers of the company to send him messages with their complaints. He then proceeds to interact with customers in a hilariously funny and often rude way. The customers, shocked by the cheek of 'The company's customer service' and, completely unaware that they are really communicating with "The Amazing Troll Man" usually react with a righteous outrage that only adds to the hilarity.

You have forced me to report this on a public forum as your customer service bots are useless and getting me nowhere. On the 3rd January I ordered the Shark Cordless Vacuum Cleaner catalog code 579/5743 order number [redacted] and it said delivery within 7 days. It's now been 12 days and I've heard nothing from Argos regarding the whereabouts of my order. Useless

You don't hear the name Joan that much these days.. Joan Collins of course, but I find her a bit pretentious to be honest and then there's Joan Rivers who had that funny voice, she sounded like she was forcing out a poo when she was speaking.. dead now god bless her soul. Not forgetting Joan of Ark, she was a very courageous lady by all accounts. Some would argue she was just a nutter tho.

I'm sorry but are you taking the piss? this is such terrible customer service and very unprofessional. If you think this is any way to handle a complaint you need to give yourself a shake. At this stage I'd like to request an immediate refund in full or I'll be contacting my bank and reporting the transaction as fraud.

Sorry I didn't mean anything by it, we are trained to speak to customers as if they were friends and me and my friends have all sorts of nicknames for one another. Our mate Dave for example, we call him 'Bum Dog Millionaire' because he lets his dog sleep in his bed and he has a well paid job. And then there's Craig who we call 'Poober' on the account that he once shat himself in the back of a taxi. I accept I've misread the room, please allow me to resolve your issue. I'm looking into it now for you.

Bon Appetit

Happy February! Mornings and evenings are now a little chilly so, after all the January dieting, it's time for a bit of warming comfort food.

When you taste this soup it's hard to believe that it is vegan, it's so creamy and satisfying and so simple to make.

LEEK & POTATO SOUP

Ingredients:

2 large potatoes peeled and cut into 1inch / 2.5cm size chunks

2 leeks sliced into rings

1 large onion chopped

2 teaspoons dried tarragon

1.5 litres vegetable stock

Black pepper

Salt to taste

Olive oil

Method:

Gently soften the onions in 2 tablespoons of olive oil then add the leeks, cook for a further 10 minutes until the leeks soften. Add the potatoes, vegetable stock and tarragon and plenty of black pepper. Bring to the boil then simmer for around 20 minutes until the potatoes are cooked. Remove from the heat and leave to cool slightly before blending. Add a little more stock if too thick. Heat and serve with a sprinkle of chilli flakes and a swirl of olive oil.

As a change to bread to accompany why not try a cheese scone with chive butter?

SLOW ROAST LAMB

Although it takes a long time to cook there is very little prep and it manly looks after itself!

Ingredients:

2 kg lamb shoulder

500 ml lamb stock

250 ml red wine

4 tbsp. corn flour

4 garlic cloves sliced lengthways

4 sprigs rosemary

2 teaspoons redcurrant jelly

1 large onion chopped

1 tsp. salt

1 tsp. pepper

1 large carrot chopped

Method:

Add the chopped veg and a sprig of rosemary to a large deep sided oven proof dish. Sprinkle over 3 tbsp. of corn flour.

Using a small sharp knife, poke holes in the lamb at regular intervals. Press in a small sprig of rosemary and a slice of a garlic clove into each hole. Season the lamb well with salt and pepper.

Place the lamb shoulder onto the vegetables, and pour the stock and wine down the sides, taking care not to wash the seasoning off of the top of the lamb. Check that the lamb is sat in the liquid (approximately a half to two-thirds covered), and if not, take out some of the vegetables and place them around the side of the meat so that the lamb sits lower in the liquid. If required, add more stock and wine using the ratio of two parts stock to one part wine. You do not need to submerge the lamb in liquid.

Cook covered loosely with foil at 150° for 4 hours or until the meat is falling off the bone. Once cooked, remove the lamb, place in another roasting dish, and cook uncovered for 20 minutes at 190°C. Whilst the lamb roasting, prepare the gravy.

GRAVY

Transfer the contents of the original roasting dish (that you used to slow cook the lamb) to a pan and add a further tbsp. of corn flour. Do this by removing a few tbsp. of the liquid into a mug, stirring in the corn flour to create a slurry, and then stirring it back into the gravy.

Bring the gravy to a boil, then reduce to a simmer. Add 2 teaspoons of redcurrant jelly, then check the thickness, and reduce further, if required.

Check the seasoning, then serve by pouring through a colander into a gravy jug, or without a colander if you prefer to keep the vegetables in the gravy.

Serve on a platter with the cooking vegetables plus potatoes of your choice. Patatas a la pobre are perfect with this dish.

CHEESE SCONES

Ingredients:

80g of mature cheddar (grated)

25g butter

175g of self-raising flour

2-3 tablespoons of milk

1 large egg

Freshly ground black pepper

1 teaspoon of wholegrain mustard

Method:

Rub the butter into the flour until it resembles breadcrumbs then stir in the cheese and add a good grind of black pepper. Whisk the egg with 2 tablespoons of the milk and the mustard then mix into the dry ingredients to form a soft dough. Add a little more milk if a bit dry.

Roll out on a lightly floured surface to around 2cm thick and cut out your scones using a 2inch (5cm) cutter. Sprinkle with a little extra cheese and bake on a lightly greased baking sheet at 200 degrees for 20 minutes until golden and well risen. Don't be tempted to open the oven before at least 15 minutes or they will sink like a stone! Serve warm with chive butter.

Beautiful You

Odyssey

We have all heard of Homers epic tale of adventures, journeys of hardship and obstacles, but we seldom look back on our own lives to see how far we have also come.

I am certain that every single one of you could regale us for hours with your tales of darkness and joy, embarrassing memories and moments of pure joy. Each life is, if not an odyssey, a series of wanderings which have washed us up on this beautiful shore. It was worth every single second wasn't it.

This year I will be writing a new book, after finally finding my beautiful home. At this moment I am planning the outline, which subjects to explore and researching facts etc. I find that when I just sit down and begin to type that the words just flow out of my fingertips, and the thoughts come easily to mind for me to transfer to the page as if the book is writing itself. I want this book to convey the joy of living, and my strong connection to nature. My last book was titled How to live after death. Maybe this one should be How to live before death!

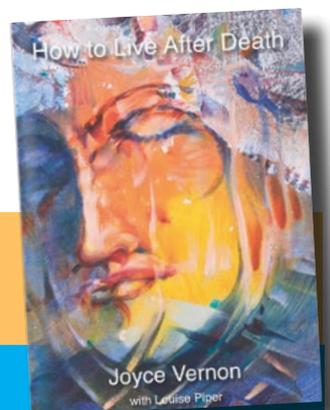

I am inspired by the constantly changing colours of the sea, and wonder just how many shades of blue there can possibly be. This morning the sea is dazzling with a million sparkles of sunlight piercing my eyes, like diamonds and the sun is so warm and rejuvenating. In the background I can hear the painters calling to each other, each of them looking like a painting themselves with their clothes daubed in multi coloured splashes. This time they are becoming whiter by the day as our street is being restored to pristine white in stark contrast to the orange stains of the Sahara rain. I have been supplying the painters with mugs of hot soup and toasted sandwiches this week as the winds were so strong with a chill to them, and this delighted but surprised them. This is just how I was raised, to respect the working man especially when he is outdoors. My father was a joiner who worked for British Rail, and he would cycle to work and back, 5 miles each way, in all weather. If I cycled 5 miles I don't think I would be able to do a full 8 hour shift never mind another 5 miles home again.

So this year will be about being creative. My new home is my haven, and I am enjoying putting things in order to create a cosy, comfortable and welcoming environment. As soon as the winter is behind us I will set up my easel and get my acrylics out, first theme will be the view from my terrace of course. Spanish lessons, painting or sewing classes, bird watching, and photography are all on my list so I intend to be a busy bee. What will you be doing?

Every single day is such a blessing and there is beauty everywhere if we just simply slow down and look. How many times in the day do you stop and look at the sky? I was driving along the beachfront last week with a friend when I saw a sea eagle quite low, being swooped on by seagulls who were no doubt protecting their young. What a sight to see, then later as I was sipping on a chilled beer my companion pointed out another one, this time high over the sea. What a magical place to live. So next time you go out, slow down. Don't just go about your daily life looking straight ahead, take time out to just look and you will be so glad you did. These are priceless moments in time so don't miss any of them. Live each day as best you can because one day you will have run out of chances to look. Fill up your heart with smiles and kindness and make yourself a priority not a rescuer. Happiness begins at home.

What's the problem

At the Advertiser magazine, we recognise that everyone needs to reach out for advice now and then. Seeking the help of someone who can not only offer a completely objective point of view but, is also qualified to advise you, may not always be possible.

We are delighted to be able to offer the services of a qualified counsellor and psychotherapist, Theresa Wood, to answer any of our readers issues or problems.

Dear Theresa

As problems go, this may seem rather trivial. I have two friends in my close circle and the three of us would regularly do things together or go out as a group with our partners. Sometimes it would be just any two of the three of us and other times all three of us.

Recently, one of them told me that she felt left out. She felt that I was spending more time with the other friend and we were doing things without including her. I assured her that this wasn't the case as I often do things with either one of them. This upset me greatly as the last thing I would ever want is for someone to feel left out. The next day I brought this up with the other friend, explaining that intentionally or not, we had upset our friend and should make more effort to include her. To my utter shock, this friend broke down in tears and said it was she who was being left out and recounted the things I had done with the other girl. She even mentioned phone calls and times we had just met by chance.

I don't know what's going on or what to do. Now I dread ringing either of them in case the other one gets offended that I didn't call her first. It's like high school again and we are all grown women. I set up a WhatsApp group with all three of us in, thinking that might solve the problem but its somehow made things worse. I wonder should I just distance myself from both of them as I am totally fed up being stuck in the middle of something so petty.

Jill

Hi Jill

Thank you for your email. It is generally quite well known that 'threes' don't work. Inevitably one or more people feel left out. The way you describe your friends and how their feelings are impacting on you, it sounds a bit like they are annoying you. What do you get out of these friendships? In some ways it sounds like a job or commitment you are doing, rather than something that you are actually enjoying. You may need to consider this before you continue.

Best wishes

Theresa

We posted this question on a confidential facebook group. The answers we received were varied. Here are some of them...

Answer 2:

Get together, talk about it honestly, perhaps you are taking too much of a leader role. Let them instigate meetings, phone calls etc. Jealousy and control have no place in a friendship.

Susan

Answer 3:

Walk away. The situation is like that of primary school children who feel you should only have one friend at a time. You're in a no-win situation with them. Walk away and leave them to it.

Suzanne

Answer 1:

Oh, what an awkward situation for you! It sounds as though you have inadvertently become a way for the other two to avoid communicating directly. I'd suggest the three of you have a get together and try to sort things out openly. Tell both of them together how you feel about the situation and how awkward you now feel about contacting them individually.

As you say, you are all grown women and you're not in the playground! It may be that either or both have something else worrying them which is playing out in your friendship, but unless the air can be cleared and each can communicate honestly then nothing will change.

It's sad to lose good friends though, and it's always worth trying to resolve honestly.

Beannie

Answer 4.

Sit down all of you together and talk it out. I suggest that each of you write down your grievances and everyone read them and then discuss. Hope this helps.

Bridie

Answer 5:

Maybe the three of you should meet up for a coffee. Have an open and frank discussion no matter how difficult this may be. Explain how it's making YOU feel too!

Welcome to your monthly hair dot com

By Beth Underhill

Each month I look forward to sharing my knowledge of hair care with you. As a Vocational Trainer and Assessor for the examiners SCOTVEC and as a salon owner for over 30 years, my passion is the science of hair and how to respect it using salon chemicals.

I will be giving you some useful tips and advice on how you can protect and care for your hair and how to make the most of your crowning glory.

WHY DOES MY HAIR ALWAYS LOOK SPLIT?

A) It is natural for your hair to split after approximately six to eight weeks which is why it is best to have your hairdresser trim the split ends off before they start to travel up the hair. Here are a few other tips to prevent your hair from breaking and/or splitting.

1) CHANGE YOUR PILLOW SLIP

Continuous friction from your pillowcase can cause split ends.

Try covering your pillow with a satin or silk pillowcase to reduce split ends and frizz. The right pillowcase can change the way your hair looks, your hair can glide over a satin or silk pillowcase much easier than a rough fabric pillowcase. Silk and satin are soft fabrics and do not generate static causing your hair to go into those little knots like other fibres do. This tip is also a great tip to help prevent those little lines appearing on your face.

2) DON'T TIE UP YOUR HAIR WHEN IT IS WET

Something that you might be doing simply out of habit is tying up your hair when it is wet. Hair that is wet is at its weakest point because the hydrogen bonds in your hair are weaker. The water between the hydrogen bonds can cause the bonds to over stretch and snap resulting in breakage to your hair. You should not be putting any pressure on your hair until your hair until it is completely dry.

3) MASSAGING YOUR SCALP

Massaging your scalp will help bring the blood to the surface of the scalp and feed the follicle. This is similar to when you tap yourself, the skin turns a tiny shade pinker due to the blood coming to the surface of the skin.

Your hairdresser can show you the best massage movements to use to encourage blood flow to the surface of the skin. Just beneath the surface of the skin the hair bulb sits in a follicle, the bulb has a matrix and this is where the nutrients are stored, these nutrients come from our blood. Stimulation to the hair bulb has been proven to encourage hair growth and produce stronger hair.

4) DON'T USE BOX DYE

Box dyes are not formulated to the same standard as the professional colour dyes, they can contain chemicals that are harmful to your hair, and also the overall colour may not turn out how you were quite expecting it to. Hairdressers are trained to look, test and feel the hair to understand the best solutions and colours for your hair.

Happy New Year to you all and I am looking forward to reading your questions throughout the year.

Beth x

Book Review By Dave The Teacher “The Thursday Murder Club” by Richard Osman

I was a bit late catching up with this first novel by that tall bloke with glasses who devised and presented some of the best-known quizzes on T.V. I suppose I was a bit dubious that, along with his other accomplishments, he could be a good writer. Well, he is and the evidence is there in this book.

The setting is an expensive retirement village where an unlikely quartet of residents meet on a weekly basis to discuss unsolved crimes. One of the original four members, a retired police officer, had a store of unsolved case records which she had “liberated” on her retirement but, unfortunately, she is now confined to a bed in the hospital wing and unable to speak or communicate. The three remaining members, a retired psychiatrist, a retired trade union official and a retired spy, recruit a new fourth member, who is a retired nurse, to continue their Thursday club meetings. Then a local developer who part-owns the retirement complex is murdered and a mysterious photograph is left next to his body. This leads the four unlikely friends to investigate their first “live” case, along with the police and other interested parties.

In writing this book, Richard Osman has updated the traditional British (dare I say English) mystery story of the kind produced by Agatha Christie and others in times gone by. This is not hardboiled detection in the American tradition of Raymond Chandler, more soft-boiled with soldiers and a nice cup of tea. It updates the tradition to a decidedly modern setting and adds charm and wit to the mixture to produce an amusing, involving and entertaining whodunit. There is something warm and familiar about the style of the writing that invites and entertains the reader before offering another twist along the route to solving the various puzzles encountered.

I really enjoyed this book and have already ordered the next two books in the series. It turns out that bloke Osman really can write and I heartily recommend this book to you.

GARDEN SNIPPETS

Fig trees are a common sight in Spain, where they have been cultivated for thousands of years.

The Mediterranean climate provides the perfect conditions for growing figs, with hot summers and mild winters. Fig trees can grow up to 30 feet tall and are known for their large, green leaves and sweet, juicy fruit. They are often found in orchards and on small farms, but also in urban areas, often in backyards and along streets. Figs are used for a variety of culinary purposes, including being eaten fresh, dried, or made into jams and preserves. They are also used in traditional medicine for their medicinal properties.

Here is how I dealt with my overgrown fig tree...

I inherited a large fig tree after moving house, unfortunately a lot of the fruit ended up being food for the birds, simply because the tree had become so overgrown that it was difficult to spot any ripe figs from under the many leaves. So, in December I thought the time had come to do some research into trimming the branches of my fig tree and to stop the birds from eating those figs I didn't spot

I started to cut off all of the branches below waist height and then I trimmed back the branches that were head height to encourage growth upwards. This would prevent figs growing in places that I wouldn't be able to see them and that they would (hopefully) beat eye level. Time will tell!

Looking at the picture of my beautiful bare fig tree I'm praying that there will be no more bending down, trying to find hidden figs and certainly no more getting poked in the eye by a stray branch. I am very sorry to our feather friends but as I have an Ornamental Cherry tree at the back of my villa I am sure they will be happy to feast on the cherries there.
